LATIN AMERICA 1810–2010

Dreams and Legacies

This page intentionally left blank

LATIN AMERICA 1810–2010

Dreams and Legacies

Claude Auroi

The Graduate Institute, Switzerland

Aline Helg

University of Geneva, Switzerland

editors

Published by

Imperial College Press
57 Shelton Street
Covent Garden
London WC2H 9HE

Distributed by

World Scientific Publishing Co. Pte. Ltd.
5 Toh Tuck Link, Singapore 596224
USA office: 27 Warren Street, Suite 401-402, Hackensack, NJ 07601
UK office: 57 Shelton Street, Covent Garden, London WC2H 9HE

British Library Cataloguing-in-Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

LATIN AMERICA 1810–2010

Dreams and Legacies

Copyright © 2012 by Imperial College Press

All rights reserved. This book, or parts thereof, may not be reproduced in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording or any information storage and retrieval system now known or to be invented, without written permission from the Publisher.

For photocopying of material in this volume, please pay a copying fee through the Copyright Clearance Center, Inc., 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, MA 01923, USA. In this case permission to photocopy is not required from the publisher.

ISBN-13 978-1-84816-846-6
ISBN-10 1-84816-846-2

In-house Editors: Samantha Yong and Catherine Yeo

Typeset by Stallion Press
Email: enquiries@stallionpress.com

Printed in Singapore.

Contents

Acknowledgments	xv
Notes on Contributors	xvii
Introduction	1
Aline Helg
Part 1 Latin America in World Geopolitics and International Relations	21
Chapter 1 Latin America in 2010: Geopolitical Shift and Strategic Ambitions	23
Alain Rouquié
1.1. Introduction	23
1.2. International Status and Autonomy	24
1.3. Geopolitics and Globalisation	28
1.4. The Restructuring of Regional Space	31
1.5. Regional Policy and Strategic Ambitions	35
1.6. Conclusion	40
Bibliography	41

Chapter 2	Decolonisation in Latin America: Its Trail-Blazing Role for Decolonisation in Other Parts of the World Marcelo G. Kohen and Katherine Del Mar	43
2.1.	Introduction	43
2.2.	Uti Possidetis	45
2.2.1.	The Originality of the Rule of Uti Possidetis	45
2.2.2.	Different Understandings of Uti Possidetis : Brazil and Hispanic America	49
2.2.3.	The Universal Applicability of Uti Possidetis	52
2.3.	The Principle of Respect for the Territorial Integrity of States	53
2.4.	Prohibition of Conquest as a Valid Mode for the Acquisition of Territorial Sovereignty	55
2.5.	The Outlawing of Colonialism and the Right of Decolonisation	57
2.6.	Conclusion	60
	Bibliography	61
Chapter 3	Latin America in the League of Nations: Bolívar's Dream Come True? Yannick Wehrli	67
3.1.	Introduction	67
3.2.	First Contact between Latin American Delegates	70
3.3.	Elections and Defense of Juridical Principles	72
3.4.	Looking for More Cooperation	74
3.5.	Freedom of Action and Esprit de Corps	77
3.6.	Conclusion	79
	Bibliography	80
Chapter 4	Shifting Position to the Global South: Latin America's Initiatives in the Early Years at the United Nations Corinne A. Pernet	83
4.1.	Introduction	83
4.2.	The World's Good Neighbor, not Latin America's	85

4.3. The Human Rights Traditions of Latin America at the United Nations	88
4.4. The Creation of CEPAL	94
4.5. Conclusion	98
Bibliography	98
Chapter 5 New Transcontinental Configurations: The US Latinos Yvette Sánchez	101
5.1. Reconquering Space	101
5.1.1. Miami	103
5.2. Demographic Landscape and Commuting Narratives	105
5.3. Latino Art and Mobility	113
5.4. Raw Materials Amalgamated	116
5.5. Hemispheric Dynamics	120
Bibliography	121
Part 2 The Nation-State, Politics, Citizenship, and Governance	123
Chapter 6 Patterns of Protest and Revolution in Latin America: 1810–1910–2010 Alan Knight	125
6.1. Introduction	125
6.2. Political and/or Social Revolutions	126
6.3. The Origins of Revolutions	132
6.4. Independence Movements in Early Nineteenth-Century Latin America	134
6.5. Revolutions in Twentieth-Century Latin America	142
Bibliography	151
Chapter 7 Education, Citizenship, and Decentralization in the Latin American Bicentenary: The Chilean Case Oscar Corvalán Vásquez	157
7.1. Summary	157
7.2. Introduction	158

7.2.1. The Limitations and Potential of Public Education to Redress Inequalities and a Historic Legacy Contrary to Democratic Development in Latin America	159
7.3. Perceptions of the Colonial Legacy in Latin America and the Effect of Dictatorships and Neo-Liberalism in Civic Formation	162
7.3.1. The Colonial Heritage in the New Republics	163
7.3.2. The Regression Suffered by Public Education During the More Recent Dictatorships	166
7.4. The Promotion of Education for the Productive Market and the Lack of Construction of Political Institutions in Chile	175
7.4.1. Centralism and the Regional Development of Production	177
7.4.2. The Transformation of Production to Achieve Equality	180
7.4.3. The Construction of Social and Political Networks	183
7.5. Education for the Development of Citizenship and Regionalization	185
7.5.1. Quality Public Education to Support Local Development	189
7.6. Conclusion	194
Bibliography	195
Chapter 8 Peru: Nation-State and Multicultural Society José Marín Gonzáles	199
8.1. Introduction	199
8.2. The Nation-State	201
8.3. National Integration	204
8.4. A Brief History of the Nation-State of Multicultural Society and Political Integration in Peru	205
8.4.1. Evangelization, Alphabetization, and Assimilation	207
8.4.2. Multiculturalism and Integration	209

8.4.3. Multicultural Society, Integration, Languages, and Cultures	210
8.5. Nation-State and Multicultural Society: The Amazon Case	211
8.6. Nation-State and Multiculturality: Between Rhetoric and Reality	217
8.7. Recent History About the Relations of the Nation-State and Multicultural Society	219
8.8. What is the Future of the Multicultural Society and its Democratic Integration?	225
Bibliography	226
Chapter 9 Interpretation of Self-Determination Right of Indigenous Peoples in Colombia after Ratification of ILO Convention 169 Leonardo Rodríguez Pérez	231
9.1. Introduction	231
9.2. Right to Self-Determination of Indigenous Peoples in International Law	232
9.3. Indigenous Peoples' Self-Determination within the Colombian Legal Order	234
9.4. Interpretation of Indigenous Peoples' Self-Determination after the 1991 Constitution	235
Reference Material	239
Bibliography	240
Chapter 10 A Political Ecology of Latin American Forests through Time Marc Hufty	241
10.1. Introduction	241
10.2. Why Latin American Forests?	244
10.3. Human Impacts on Forests before 1492	250
10.4. Latin American Forests in the Western Collective Imagination	251
10.5. The Politics of Conservation	255

10.6. Participatory Conservation	257
10.7. Conclusion	262
Bibliography	262
Part 3 Rurality, Economy, and Models of Development	269
Chapter 11 Rural Areas vs. Cities in Latin American History Claude Auroi	271
11.1. Introduction	271
11.2. What is Rurality?	273
11.3. Formation of the Rural–Urban Complex	273
11.4. Transport and Interrelationship	275
11.5. Extractivism as a Permanent Model for Latin America	282
11.6. Man and the Agricultural Use of Land	283
11.7. Archetypes and Stereotypes of Peasantry	284
11.8. Minifundio and Latifundio	290
11.9. Conclusion	294
Bibliography	295
Chapter 12 Is Growth Driven by External Demand a Solution to Economic Crises? Pierre Salama	299
12.1. Introduction	299
12.2. From One Crisis to Another...	301
12.2.1. Unexpected Consequences of the 1930 Crisis: An Original Mode of Industrialisation in Argentina, Brazil and Mexico	301
12.2.2. The 2008 Crisis	304
12.3. Can History Repeat Itself?	306
12.3.1. A Stronger (But Still Relatively Weak) Contribution of Foreign Trade to Growth	307
12.3.2. Strong Inequalities as Barriers to Recovery of Growth by the Domestic Market	311
12.4. Conclusion	313
Bibliography	316

Chapter 13	Foreign Investment in Latin America: Between Love and Hatred Jorge E. Viñuales and Magnus Jesko Langer	319
13.1.	Introduction	319
13.2.	From Gunboat Diplomacy to Diplomatic Protection (1810–1907)	320
13.3.	Foreign Investment between National and International Protection (1907–1948)	327
13.4.	Foreign Investment Protection in the Era of Decolonization (1948–1990)	338
13.5.	Globalization and Foreign Investment Protection (1990–Present)	343
13.6.	Conclusion	350
	Bibliography	352
Chapter 14	Latin American Regionalism and the Role of UN-ECLAC, 1948–2010 Edgard Moncayo, Philippe De Lombaerde and Oscar Guinea Ibáñez	359
14.1.	Introduction	359
14.2.	First Phase: Integration as a Platform for Development	360
14.3.	Second Phase: Integration as a “Building Block” for Trade Liberalization	369
14.4.	Toward a Third Phase: Beyond Open Regionalism	378
14.5.	Conclusion	381
	Bibliography	382
Chapter 15	NAFTA: Springboard or Trap? Christian Deblock	387
15.1.	Introduction	387
15.2.	NAFTA in Brief	388
15.2.1.	Objectives	388
15.2.2.	NAFTA: A Turning Point for the Three Countries	390

xii Contents

15.3. The Particulars of NAFTA	391
15.4. The Results of NAFTA	393
15.4.1. Trade	394
15.4.2. Investment	396
15.4.3. Economic Growth	399
15.4.4. NAFTA Under Stress	405
15.4.5. Chinese Competition	406
15.5. Trade Options	409
15.6. Conclusion	412
Bibliography	415
Part 4 Religion, Cultures, and Ethnic Identities	417
Chapter 16 The Religious Field in Latin America: Autonomy and Fragmentation David Lehmann	419
16.1. Introduction	419
16.2. Religion: Popular and Erudite	421
16.3. Reining in and Riding the Periphery from Romanization to John Paul II	427
16.4. Devotional and Charismatic Movements at the Turn of the Century	436
16.5. Church and Politics	442
16.6. Religious Regulation and Laicidad	445
16.7. Political Involvement	446
16.8. Which Field? How Much Autonomy?	449
Bibliography	455
Chapter 17 Indigenous Peoples of Latin America Between Assimilation, Disappearance, Mestizaje and Re-emergence: The Argentine Case Sabine Kradolfer	459
17.1. Introduction	459
17.2. The ‘Discovery’ of the Americas: From Radical Otherness to Intermingling	461

17.3. Egalitarianism in Republican Ideology	463
17.4. The Brutal Incorporation of the Mapuche into the Argentine State	466
17.5. The (Re)emergence of Indigenous Peoples in the Late Twentieth Century	469
17.6. Conclusion	473
Bibliography	473
Chapter 18 Afro-Latin Americans and the Limits of Equal Rights: 1810–1910–2010 Aline Helg	477
18.1. Introduction	477
18.2. The Independence Struggle and its Outcome for Free and Enslaved Peoples of African Descent	478
18.3. Abolition in Brazil and Cuba in the Age of Positivism and Pseudoscientific Racism	482
18.4. Land Rights and Autonomy Versus Agro-Business and Mining Interests	488
Bibliography	495
Chapter 19 What Shall Become of Us Without Any Barbarians? Central American Gangs and the Utopia of Civilization in Latin America Dennis Rodgers	499
19.1. Introduction	499
19.2. Gangs of Central America	501
19.3. Barbarians at the Gate? The Symbolic Construction of Gangs	506
19.4. Conclusion	513
Bibliography	514
Index	517

This page intentionally left blank

Acknowledgments

The essays included in Latin America, 1810–2010: Dreams and Legacies were presented at a conference held in March 2010 at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. Organized by Claude Auroi and Aline Helg, the conference received major funding from the Swiss Society of Americanists (SSA) and the Swiss Academy for the Humanities and Social Sciences (ASSH) as well as from the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, the Pierre Du Bois Foundation, the Faculty of Arts (Faculté des Lettres) and its Department of History at the University of Geneva, and the European Association of Research and Training Institutes for Development (EADI). We express our profound gratitude to these institutions that made the conference — and thus this book — possible.

We are grateful to the contributors to this volume and to all the participants who made the conference a rewarding and enjoyable experience, notably Isabelle Milbert, professor at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, and Yasmina Tippenhauer, Director of the Cultural Center Tierra Incógnita in Geneva, who kindly agreed to moderate some sessions; Irina Du Bois, President of the Pierre Du Bois Foundation, for her enthusiastic support, as well as Nicole Anliker, Tzinti Ramírez, and Leonardo Rodríguez for their expert organizational skills.

Some texts had to be translated from French and Spanish and we are very grateful to Maya Ostrofsky and Andrew Philominraj for their work.

We also extend our thanks to Imperial College Press, particularly Commissioning Editor Elena Nash and Senior Editor Jacqueline Downs, for their commitment to transforming this conference into a book.

Claude Auroi and Aline Helg
Editors

Notes on Contributors

Claude Auroi

He is Professor emeritus at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. He has been teaching rural development and the history of Latin American development for more than 30 years. In the 1980s he worked as a scientific adviser at the International Potato Center in Lima. A Doctor in International and Political Sciences, he has undertaken extensive research on agrarian issues in Peru, Bolivia, and West Africa and has been a consultant for the Swiss Development Corporation, UNESCO, and other organizations and NGOs. Recently he has also dealt with problems of governance, migration, and integration in Latin America. He is the author of Des Incas au Sentier Lumineux, l'histoire violente du Pérou (Georg, Geneva, 1988), and editor of Latin American and East European Economies in Transition: A Comparative View (Frank Cass, London, 1998), among others. He is the President of the Swiss Society of Americanists. He was also the Executive Secretary of the European Association of Development Research and Training Institutes (EADI) between 1989 and 1999.

Oscar Corvalán Vásquez

He is a Professor at the Institute for Research and Development of Education at the University of Talca, Chile. His training includes sociology, a PhD in History from the University of Concepción (Chile) and a PhD in Educational Sciences from the University of Toronto. His research areas are technical and professional education, the urban informal sector, the sociology and economics of child and teenager education and the teaching of social sciences and economics. Since the 1990s he has also studied and evaluated projects on the interaction between the workplace and the world of education. He was the designer of the curriculum of the Euro-Chilean Institute of Tourism at the Universidad de la Frontera. He has served as an adviser for the programs of Technical Education of the Ministries of Education of Chile and Uruguay. He has published El aprendizaje en la industria: Evaluación de una experiencia chilena (CINTERFOR/OIT, Montevideo, 1980) as well as various articles on adult education and the formation of disadvantaged young people.

Philippe De Lombaerde

He is Associate Director at the United Nations University Institute on Comparative Regional Integration Studies (UNU-CRIS) in Bruges (Belgium). Previously he was an Associate Professor of International Economics at the Universidad Nacional de Colombia (Bogotá), a Researcher and Lecturer at the University of Antwerp, and a Researcher at the National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA) (Bangkok). He has been a consultant for the governments of Belgium, Flanders, France, Colombia, and Thailand as well as the UN, the International Labor Organization, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, and the European Commission. His research interests include regional economic integration, international trade, monitoring tools and indicators, comparative regionalism, Latin American regionalism, EU external policy, and cross-border micro-regions. His books include Regionalisation and Global Governance: The Taming of Globalisation? with A. Cooper and C. Hughes (Routledge, London, 2008); Del regionalismo latinoamericano a la integración interregional, with S. Kochi and J. Briceño (Siglo XXI, Madrid, 2008), and Integración asimétrica y convergencia económica en las Américas (Universidad Nacional de Colombia–Antropos, Bogotá, 2002).

Christian Deblock

He is Professor of International Political Economy at the University of Québec in Montréal, Director of the Center for Integration and Globalization Studies (CEIM), and co-editor of the journal Papers in Political Economy. He earned his MA and PhD in Economics from the University of Montréal and the University of Louvain. He has been a visiting professor at various universities, such as the Institut des Hautes Etudes de l'Amérique latine in Paris and the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (UNAM). He has also worked as a consultant on matters of economic integration and trade negotiations, notably for the International Organization of La Francophonie. His research focuses on regional economic integration, US trade policy, and international economic institutions. He has co-authored numerous books and articles, including Nord-Sud: La reconnexion périphérique, with Henri Regnault (Athena, Montréal, 2006); L'ALENA: Le libre-échange en défaut, with Dorval Brunelle (Fides, Montréal, 2004); and Le bien commun comme réponse à la mondialisation, with Olivier Delas (Bruylant, Brussels, 2004).

Katherine Del Mar

She is a PhD candidate in international law at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva, and a Teaching and Research Assistant at the Faculty of Law, University of Geneva. She holds a BA and a JD from the University of Queensland, Australia, and an LLM (mention très bien) from the Geneva Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights. She is researching proof before the International Court of Justice and has published a number of articles in international law, including 'The Requirement of "Belonging" under International Humanitarian Law', European Journal of International Law, 21/1 (2010).

Oscar Guinea Ibáñez

He is currently an intern at the European Commission–DG Trade in Brussels, having previously worked as a researcher at UNU-CRIS. He is an economist with degrees from the College of Europe (Belgium), Sussex University (UK) and the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Spain). He has also spent research time at the UN Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (Chile) where he was working on the links between Food Security and Biofuels in Latin America. His research interests lie largely in the field of Development Economics, especially in issues between EU and ACP countries. He is also interested in the spatial analysis of poverty, inequality, trade, and regional integration. He is co-author of ‘Systems of Indicators for Monitoring Regional Integration Processes: Where Do We Stand Anno 2010?’, published in Köz-Gazdaság — Economic Theory and Policy (2010).

Aline Helg

She is Professor of History at the University of Geneva. She has taught as an Associate Professor at the Department of History and the Teresa Lozano Long Institute of Latin American Studies of the University of Texas at Austin (1989–2003), and at the Universidad de Los Andes in Bogotá. She has been a resident scholar at the National Humanities Center in North Carolina. Her areas of specialization are independence and nation building, the African Diaspora in the western hemisphere, ethnicity, and racism, on which she has published journal articles and chapters. Her books include Liberty and Equality in Caribbean Colombia, 1770–1835 (University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 2004) and Our Rightful Share: The Afro-Cuban Struggle for Equality, 1886–1912 (University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1995), both winners of prizes from the American Historical Association, and La educación en Colombia, 1918–1957: Una historia social, económica y política (CEREC, Bogotá, 1987; reprint, 2001). She is currently writing a comparative study of slavery and abolition in the Americas.

Marc Hufty

He is a Professor at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. He has a doctorate in Political Science from the Graduate Institute of International Studies (HEI) and the University of Geneva. He specializes in the areas of public policy and governance applied to biodiversity, protected areas, forests and social movements. He has conducted research for the Swiss National Fund and taught in Argentina, Bolivia, Peru, and Madagascar, and he coordinates several research projects. He has published several books on Argentina and Bolivia, and most notably he is the co-editor of A donde va Bolivia? Gobernancia, gobernabilidad y democratización (Plural, La Paz, 2005).

Alan Knight

He is Professor of Latin American History at Oxford University and a Fellow at St Antony's College. He previously taught at the University of Essex and the University of Texas at Austin, and he was a visiting fellow at the Center for US-Mexican Studies at the University of California, San Diego. His chief interest is twentieth-century Latin American history, with a focus on Mexico, agrarian society, state-building, revolutions, popular movements, education, and culture, on which he has published several articles. He is the author of the award-winning The Mexican Revolution (2 vols, Cambridge University Press, Cambridge, 1986) and has co-edited The Mexican Petroleum Industry in the Twentieth Century, with Jonathan C. Brown (University of Texas Press, Austin, 1992). After the publication of the first two volumes of a general history of Mexico, Mexico: From the Beginning to the Conquest, and Mexico: The Colonial Era (Cambridge University Press, Cambridge, 2002), he is completing its third and last volume, Mexico Since Independence, and doing research for a socio-political study of Mexico in the 1930s.

Marcelo G. Kohen

He is Professor of International Law at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. He has also served as a counsel and advocate for a number of states before the International Court of Justice and has been a visiting professor at several European universities. He is generally interested in research related to international law theory, territorial and border disputes, as well as international dispute settlement. His most notable publication is Possession contestée et souveraineté territoriale (Adverse Possession and Territorial Sovereignty), PUF, Paris, 1997), which was awarded the Paul Guggenheim Prize in 1997. His other publications include various articles and book chapters, and he edited or co-edited the following: Secession: International Law Perspectives (Cambridge University Press, Cambridge, 2006); State Practice Regarding State Immunities /La Pratique des Etats Concernant les Immunités des Etats, with Gerhard Hafner and Susan Breau (bilingual, Martinus Nijhoff, Leiden, 2006); and Promoting Justice, Human Rights and Conflict Resolution through International Law: Liber Amicorum Lucius Caflisch (bilingual, Martinus Nijhoff, Leiden, 2007).

Sabine Kradolfer

She is an Anthropologist and a Sociologist. She has a doctorate from the University of Lausanne and University of Paris III. Her doctoral thesis focused on the social organization of Mapuche communities in the province of Neuquén in Argentina. Between 2000 and 2009, she taught at the University of Lausanne successively as an assistant and a substitute professor, and was also the director of a research project. She is currently conducting post-doctoral research at the University of Barcelona and the National University of Rio Negro (Argentina), thanks to a research grant from the Swiss National Fund. Her research is entitled: 'Indigenous claims and assertions of identity in Latin America: how the respect of differences generates differences'. She has published Quand la parenté impose, le don dispose. Organisation sociale, don et identité dans les communautés mapuche de la province de Neuquén (Argentine) (Peter Lang, Bern, 2011) and 'Les autochtones invisibles ou comment l'Argentine s'est "blanchie"', Cahiers ALHIM 16 (2008; available online: <http://alhim.revues.org/index3028.html>).

Magnus Jesko Langer

He is a Teaching and Research Assistant at the International Law Unit of the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies (Geneva). He is a PhD candidate in International Law at the Institute, and holds an MA in International Law (HEID), a Licence in International Relations (HEI), and a Bachelor in Law (University of Geneva). His research focuses on the fields of international environmental law and international investment law. His thesis analyses the question of how international environmental law has impacted the entitlements that states enjoy over their natural resources. He has written, with J.E. Viñuales, 'Managing Conflicts between Environmental and Investment Norms in International Law', in International Law Faced with Environmental Problems (Hart Publishing, Oxford, 2011).

David Lehmann

He is a sociologist and an anthropologist. After teaching at the Institute of Development Studies of the University of Sussex, UK, he moved to Cambridge University where he served as the Director of the Centre for Latin American Studies for ten years. His research focused first on agricultural development and land reform, especially in Chile and Ecuador, and later shifted to Brazil and to the role of Catholic intellectuals and activists in such popular movements as Liberation Theology and the People's Church. Recently, he has turned his attention to evangelical Protestantism and ultra-Orthodox Judaism. He is currently working on the diffusion of multiculturalism (interculturalidad) in Latin America (especially Mexico, Peru and Brazil), with the aim of using the Latin American example to cast light on the political and philosophical issues arising from cultural relativism and multiculturalism in Britain and Europe. His major publications include Democracy and Development in Latin America: Economics, Politics and Religion in the Post-War Period (Temple University Press, Philadelphia, 1990); Struggle for the Spirit: Religious Transformation and Popular Culture in Brazil and Latin America (Polity Press, Oxford, 1996); and Remaking Israeli Judaism: The Challenge of the Shas (Hurst Co., London, 2006) (written with Batia Siebzehner).

José Marín Gonzáles

He is an independent scholar with a PhD in Anthropology from the University of Paris I-Sorbonne and an MA from the University Institute of Development Studies in Geneva. From 1971 to 1987 he has participated in research projects on the Andean and the Amazon regions in association with the Central University of Peru, the University of Manchester, and the Institute of Advanced Studies of Latin America in Paris. He has taught at the University of Geneva and collaborates with the School of Social and Pedagogic Studies in Lausanne and the Institute of Social Studies in Geneva. He is the author of Peuples indigènes, missions religieuses et colonialisme interne dans l'Amazonie Péruvienne (Svenska Institutet för missionsforskning Uppsala Universitet, Uppsala, 1992), and of contributions such as 'Histoire de l'Etat Nation : de la politique d'intégration en Europe et en Amérique latine' in Intégrations et migrations: Regards pluridisciplinaires, edited by Christiane Perregaux (L'Harmattan, Paris, 2001).

Edgard Moncayo

He is Director of the Center of Economic Studies in the School of Economics of the Universidad Central, Bogotá, and an Associate Research Fellow at the United Nations University Institute on Comparative Regional Integration Studies (UNU-CRIS) in Bruges. He was previously the Director of the Colombian Delegation at the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), a member of the Andean Pact Board, the General Director of the Colombian Institute of Foreign Trade, the Economic Secretary of the President of Colombia, and the Economic Counsellor of the Colombian Embassy in Washington DC. He has also been involved in consultancy with international organizations such as the International Development Bank, and is a visiting fellow at Oxford University. His areas of interest are international trade and economic integration, industrial development, and regional and urban economics. His books include Impactos territoriales de la globalización: Una perspectiva macro-sectorial (Universidad Autónoma de Colombia, Bogotá, 2007).

Corinne A. Pernet

She has a Swiss National Fund Research Professorship at the University of St. Gallen. Holding a PhD from the University of California, she undertook research at the Universities of Illinois and Texas. After three years as Assistant Professor at the University of Oklahoma, she joined the History Department of the University of Zurich, also as Assistant Professor. Her interests focus on twentieth-century Latin American and international history, with an emphasis on transnational movements. Having worked on cultural relations between the United States and Latin America, she is currently completing a book on the cultural aspects of Latin American engagement in the League of Nations and UNESCO. She is also beginning research for a project on food policies in Latin America in relation to development and cultural heritage. She is the author of several articles and book chapters as well as of El MEMCH hizo Historia (Fundación Biblioteca y Archivo de la Mujer, Santiago de Chile, 1997).

Dennis Rodgers

He is Senior Research Fellow in the Brooks World Poverty Institute (BWPI) at the University of Manchester, UK, and Visiting Senior Fellow in the Crisis States Research Centre (CSRC) at the London School of Economics and Political Science, UK. A social anthropologist by training, his research focuses on issues relating to gang violence and urban development in Nicaragua, and the politics of democratisation in Argentina. He is the author of 'Living in the Shadow of Death: Gangs, Violence, and Social Order in Urban Nicaragua, 1996–2002', Journal of Latin American Studies, 38/2 (2006); 'Slum Wars of the 21st Century. Gangs, Mano Dura, and the New Urban Geography of Conflict in Central America', Development and Change, 40/5 (2009); and he has co-edited, with G. A. Jones, Youth Violence in Latin America: Gangs and Juvenile Justice in Perspective (Palgrave Macmillan, New York, 2009).

Leonardo Rodríguez Pérez

He holds an MA in History from the University of Limoges (France) and an MA in the History of Alien Worlds and International Relations from the University of Paris I Sorbonne. He is currently working on a Doctoral thesis on the indigenous discourse in Colombia between 1970 and 2000, at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. He is interested in indigenous peoples and the history of Latin America in general, and is the recipient of the Pierre du Bois scholarship granted to doctoral students from Latin America attending the Graduate Institute. His MA thesis is entitled 'Les Discours politiques dans la guerre civile de 1854 en Nouvelle Grenade' (Paris, Latin American and Spanish Cultures Research Centre, CRALMI, University of Paris I).

Alain Rouquié

He is Research Director emeritus at the French National Foundation of Political Science and President of the House of Latin America in Paris. He is a political scientist, specializing in contemporary Latin America. He has been the Ambassador of France to El Salvador, Mexico and Brazil. He has published numerous books and articles on Latin America, such as Pouvoir militaire et société politique en République argentine (Presses de la Fondation nationale des sciences politiques, Paris, 1978); L'Etat militaire en Amérique latine (Seuil, Paris, 1982); Amérique latine: Introduction à l'Extrême-Occident (Seuil, Paris, 1987); Guerres et paix en Amérique centrale (Seuil, Paris, 1992); Le Brésil au XXI^e siècle: Naissance d'un nouveau grand (Fayard, Paris, 2006); and, most recently, A l'ombre des dictatures: La démocratie en Amérique latine (Albin Michel, Paris, 2010).

Pierre Salama

He is an economist and specialist in Latin America. He is a Professor at the University of Paris XIII, and a member of the editorial board of several journals; he was scientific director of the journal Tiers Monde.

His main areas of research concern the dynamics of underdevelopment and the modes of economic financing of emerging countries, and poverty. He specializes in drug economy, and presented a report to the Council of Europe on violence in Latin America. The Chair, Julio Cortázar, named him a Doctor Honoris Causa of the Autonomous University of Mexico and the University of Guadalajara (Mexico). He has published numerous books and most have been translated into Spanish and Portuguese. Among his individual works are: Sur la valeur: Élément pour une critique (François Maspero, Paris, 1975) and Le défi des inégalités: Amérique latine/Asie — une comparaison économique (Editions La Découverte, Paris, 2006). He has also directed various collective works such as: Mesures et démesure de la pauvreté (2002) and recently Les Suds dans la crise, with Philippe Hugon (2010).

Yvette Sánchez

She is Professor of Hispanic Cultures and Literature at the University of St. Gallen, and Director of the Centre for Latin American Studies (CLSHSG). She has studied Spanish and English Language and Literature and Anthropology, and received her PhD from the University of Basel, with a thesis published as Religiosidad cotidiana en la narrativa reciente hispanocaribeña (Hispanica Helvética, Lausanne, 1992). She is now conducting research for projects on Latin American cultural topics, especially on US Latinos. She is also involved in the fields of Interculturality, TransArea and Hemispheric Studies. Her literary interests focus on the poetics of failure, collectionism, and visibility and on the Spanish author Enrique Vila-Matas. Her second monograph is Coleccionismo y literatura (Cátedra, Madrid, 1999). She has also edited or co-edited several books, such as Poéticas del fracaso, with Roland Spiller (Gunter Narr/A. Francke, Tübingen, 2009), Fehler im System. Irrtum Defizit und Katastrophe als Faktoren kultureller Produktivität, with Felix Philipp Ingold (Wallstein Verlag, Göttingen, 2008), and the anthology Cuentos de humo (Siruela, Madrid, 2001).

Jorge E. Viñuales

He is Assistant Professor at the Graduate Institute of International Studies, Geneva. He received his PhD from the Institute of Political Sciences in Paris. He is also a Counsel with the law firm Lévy Kaufmann-Kohler in Geneva, as well as the Executive Director of the Latin American Society of International Law. Before joining the Graduate Institute, he was a full-time practitioner specializing in international investment law. He has worked on many cases under ICSID, UN CITRAL, PCA, ICC, or LCIA rules, including several high profile inter-state and investor-state disputes. He has also served as consultant or provided advice on different matters of international law to private companies, governments, international organizations and major NGOs. His research currently focuses on the interface between environment and investment, a topic on which he has published several articles in leading journals; his forthcoming book, Foreign Investment and the Environment in International Law, will be published by Cambridge University Press.

Yannick Wehrli

He is a PhD candidate at the Department of History of the University of Geneva and holds an MA in History and Spanish and Portuguese cultures. He has previously been a teaching assistant in Contemporary History at the University of Geneva, and in 2006 he was awarded a one-year fellowship from the Swiss National Fund to conduct research in several archives in Latin America and the United States. His forthcoming PhD dissertation focuses on Latin American states' foreign policy regarding conflict prevention and resolution during the inter-war period, with special emphasis on Latin American participation in the League of Nations and the pan-American movement. His areas of interest are political history and international relations of Latin America in the twentieth century as well as the history of international organizations, on which he has published articles and book chapters, such as 'Les délégations latino-américaines et les intérêts de la France à la Société des Nations', Relations Internationales 137/1 (2009).

Figure 1